From the Hou. R. S. Taney, Chief Justice of the United States.
"It is a work of much value and well executed. The heads under which the different Acts of Congress are arranged, are well chosen and appropriate; and what is still more important, the Index, so far as I have been able to examine it, is complete. The hook has wridently been prepared with much care and judgment, and will, I doubt not, be very acceptable to the public."

"I have perposely postponed my acknowledge ment to you for Mr. Brighty's Analytical Digest of the Laws of the United States in comble me to test the flocility of its assessition and its assemblers. Mr. Brightly has succeeded in bringing the Laws of the United States into a single volume, so that we may see not saily what the legislation of Congress has been, but what it is; with such marginal references to the Statutes at Large that the lest of the Digest may either be verified or disproved, if any instance of the inter case be done. I have used the Digest constantly at the torm of the Supreme Court. It has saved me much labor and trouble. As a whole it has been well done by Mr. Brightly and it deserves the special patronage of hawyers and maristrates, and of all persons sugaged in public life, as well as those who have no prolessional burdiness, who are, nevertheless, under some chiligations to have by them at all times the readient means of learning what has been the regulation of the Congress of the United States. AUTHOR'S PRETACE.

"The contects of this volume are the results of two visits to Paris; the first when Louis Napoleon was Prosident of the Republic, and the second when Napoleon III, was Emperor of France. I have sketched geople and places and objects as I saw them at both periods, and the reader should bear this in unid.

"I have not endeavosed to make a handbook to Paris, but have described those places and objects which came more particularly order my notice. I have also thought it best, instead of devoting my whole space to the description of places, or the massions of the people—a subject which has been pretty well exhausted by other winter—to give a few shetches of the great men of Paris and of France; and among them, a few of the representative literary men of the past. There is not a general knowledge of French literature and authors, either past or present, among the mass of readers; and Faits and France can only be truly known through French authors at differentire.

"My object has been to add amounts to the general reader's knowledge of Frie and the Parisans, of the people and the place, whose social laws are the general guide of the civilized wered."

Do, my friend, now do be quiet,
White I isten to a story
Full of beauty full of terror,
Told by one we all have heard of,
Told by one whose laurels nitter?
By the wreath of mighty Cooper.
He will peint for as the Ocean,
Ca'm or lashed to awful fury;
He will lead his plorious Hero
Through a thousand bold adventures;
He will take our bushed hearts captive
With his large mirrauleus rouches;
He will make us lose all trouble,
Stirring up our noblest passions—

Stirring up our noblest passions— Master of the passions, Conn.! Monarch wid Romancers, Conn.! Seated on his throne, the LEDGER, Heart-entrancing, wordrous Conn.!

O then that with Romanner's glory crowned, Lookest from thy sole dominion like the god Of Firtion's world; at whose sight all the once Who in that world are somewhat flourishing, Hide their diminished heads; to thee I call, And with a friendly voice, and add thy name, O Cona! to tell thee how I love thy take. Told in the Naw York Lender line ago: And now I see thee in the Lenders stand. Once more presimient—O thriling Cens! Worthy as Milton's Sun of grat ful praise!

There is an awful silence in the sky,
When full of wondrous thoughts and light supreme,
A Star comes up in solden prophecy.
There is an awful it note in the world.
When full of wondrous deeds and interest deep,
Cliffs following cliffs and bille we roaring wild,
Swords clasted on swords and brow to brow oppose.
A Tale comes up to hushed Manhattan,
And its thousands see in plumed Romance,
Their favorite Sylkanus Costs again,
Cost in the Lenger with a Tale again:

Femiaine.

She walks in beaty like the night
Of starry climes and cloudless skies,
And all that's beat of dark and bright
Meet in her aspect and her eyes,
Bat mellowed to that tender light
Which Heaven to gaudy day denies.

Masculine.

Re sails in power like the storm
That bests on Albion's towering shore,
And valor plumes the Rever's form
That bright-eyed woman must adore,
While Com, with his old accents warm,
Speaks in the LEDGER one tale more.

Chorus.

Speak on! speak on, Romancer bold!
Love, Chivalry, and Action thine:
For these hese flags are us rolled,
And thine the bine, eternal Brine,
Sounding its music, deep and old,
Within the Story's staring line,

I'm weary with mountain, I'm weary with vale,
Though the feeling a notion may be:
O, give me a vessel: O, give me a sail:
And hurrah for a course on the sea!
How the breves will play on my pale, weary brow!
How the billows will dance on my path!
What a freshness will breathe over tafrall and prow,
Though the hurricane comes in its weath!

But "A helmsman! a helmsman!" I lustily cry,
"Ho! a helmsman!—I never could steer;
Ry myself I would quall at a cloud in the sky,
And on cocan at 'ast find a bler!"

Hatk! an answering voice—"I am ready, my boy, For my home is where wild billows bob! Will you take me again in your galant employ With a will, thou invincible Come?"

And the New-York Lenger is the vessel, and the grand, beautiful Ocean of Romanes the cruising ground, and the bave and the lovely my compations, who number several mildons, for the Lengers second modates that number of passengers. The vessel starts to-day on her voyage.

A life on the ocean wave,
A home on the rolling deep,
Where the winds and temperate ray
And the scattered waters leap.
On time with the Rowr bold
Where the billows rise and bob,

If you'll only give to me For a comrade, thrilling Cons!

What a joyous cruise is ours! How delightful we will fluct O'er the scul entrancing sea With the LEDGER for our boat,

As the curiews round as ecream, And the billows rise and bob, While we listen to a yarn From the thrilling lipe of Coss!

Listen to a tale of England.
Of the wondrona, brave old England—
Brave although the Yankees licked her,
To the tone of Yankee Dodle.
Yankee Doodle with its movement
Grand as music from a jewsharp
Played on by a Belgic glant,
By a rampant Belgic giant!

Who can tell a tale of England?
Who is withing? Who is able?
He who wields a pen so daring,

You would thisk it surely process. Wing of some tremond us easie Playing with the blast and thunder; He who has a facile fancy. Facile as the curis of Beauty Tossed about by Southern zephyrs; He who still to fact it wedded in old Truth's majestic Temple.

AFTER BARRY CORNWALL.

AFTER DIBDIN.

Who is willing? Who is able?
Who but he, the growned Romancer—
Dashing, flashing, fearless, peerless
Cons.!
Sparkling, darkling, pouring, searing,
Never snoring Cons.!
Would you see him? Would you hear him?
Read the LEDGER—Bunner's LINGER—
Giorious LEDGER with its CORS.

I feeriess walk my bounding deck;
I flirg my banner to the breeze;
For me, for me a gallant back,
And life upon the seas.
I laugh suid the howling storm;
I shout to every flashing cloud—
Nor quali, as others quali, before
The tempest's lurid shroud;

O, man is for high action made—
For deeds his muscle, nerve and soul,
And therefore I rejoice where'er
The mountain billows roli:
Dash on, dash on ye crested waves!
For I, o'er every for elasto,
Feel that I'm worthy here to be
Old Ocean's mighty mate!

For the extraordinary adventures of the extraordinary person who might have sung these extraordinary scansas, see the extra-ordinary Ludden in which the extraordinary Romancer, Mr. Cosh, is just commencing a new, extraordinary Story.

Sea Rover, Sea Rover, salling wide ocean over, What triumph I see in your eye, As you make the wild billow your glorious pillow, Or dash with the hurricane by.

Sea Rover, Sea Rover, sailing wide cosm over,
Why glitters such joy in your eye?
Do you think of your shilldbood, the cliff and the wildwood?
Or, say, is the enemy nigh?

I think not of childhood—the cliff or the wildwood— These only for tear and for sob; But I think of glory I shall have in the Story Of thrilling, unparalleled Coss.

SIR WALTER SCOTT'S OPINION OF IT.

Breathes there a man with soil so deed,
Who never both the LEDGER read,
At evening to his freeded band?
Whose heart both ne'er within him burned,
As home his botsteps he hash turned,
Carrying a LEDGER is his hand?

Carrying a LEDDER in his hand?
If such there be, go mark bim well;
For him no sweetheart's rapturers well—
For him no wife's or children's smile.
Will the weary evolute hours begule.
High though his office, proud his name,
Brisk his business as wish can claim,
Despite his office, power, and pelf,
The blockhead, centered all in self,
When to his breakfast he comes down,
All folling in his dresting yours,
Shall drink cold coffice every morn,
Nor comfort take, except "in a horn,"
White his wife shall to the newsman dy,
And with her cwn pence the LEDGER buy.

AFTER-NOT A POET (fortunately).

O, heard ye the shoot of the newsboys this morning.
As it rose so the sit so kearty and hold.
While the old and the young together came awarming.
To the offices where the last Landau is sold.

O, great is the rush to the newspaper sellers!
And loud is the chirk of the penules that fall
Into their till as "the jelly good fellows"
The Landers hand out at their customers on And why is this rush? And why is this bustle? And why do the ladies thus mix in the strife? They sure would not inhitly thus struggle and tesale— To danger exposing their crinoline and life?

The reason is this, that Come's new Sea Story
This morning appears in the Lengare—just out;
And for this do the fair, the young and the heary
Thus recklessly mingle amid the wild rout.

This story of Coun's is a Tale of the Ocean, With it may the mind of fatigue be beguiled; In every heart must the strongs t emotion Be raised by its scenes of adventure so wild,
